

A Coastal Getaway for Lehigh and Powell

The Lehigh and Powell crew recently traded their everyday scenery for ocean views, salty air, and a refreshing day on the Oregon Coast. The group stopped at a waterfront overlook where they could watch the waves, take in the wide-open sky, and enjoy the driftwood-covered shoreline. The weather brought a little of everything the coast is known for—dramatic clouds, patches of blue sky, a cool breeze, and just enough sunshine to brighten the day.

Of course, no coastal adventure is complete without a good meal. Everyone gathered around the table at a local restaurant for lunch, cold drinks, and time to relax together before heading back out to enjoy more of the scenery.

One of the nicest things about the Oregon Coast is that it never looks exactly the same twice. The tide, clouds, wind, and light are always changing, making every visit feel like a new experience. This trip offered plenty of time to slow down, look across the water, and capture some wonderful group photos.

With beautiful views, good food, and great company, the Lehigh and Powell coastal getaway was a day well spent. Sometimes the best adventures begin with a drive toward the ocean.
